

Which is the best example of Frederick Douglass avoiding emotion while writing about an emotional experience?

A. I spent the most part of all these three days in the creek, washing off the plantation scurf, and preparing myself for my departure.

B. I was probably between seven and eight years old when I left Colonel Lloyd's plantation.

C. The thought of owning a pair of trousers was great indeed!

D. I was seldom whipped by my old master, and suffered little from any thing else than hunger and cold.?

Frederick Douglass was an African American slave who later got freedom from slavery. The best example of Frederick Douglass avoiding emotion while writing about an emotional experience is;

- D. I was seldom whipped by my old master and suffered little from anything else than hunger and cold.?

In this statement, we see his descriptions of his hardships. He, however, tried not to feel too involved or affected by the actions of his master.

He belittled his problems when he referred to his suffering as little.

Therefore, this is the best example of Frederick Douglass' avoiding of emotion when writing something emotional.
