

Why is realism said to be a reaction to romanticism?

Answer: Unlike the romantics, realism chose to use real-life situation over idealism.

Explanation: Romanticism was a product of the Enlightened Era, which is portrayed as more dramatic and glorified. However, with the rise of the Industrial and Commercial Revolutions, social and political changes created the Realism, a movement which aims to depict what thing objectively.

Because during the Age of Enlightenment humanity emphasized nature and emotions, more subjective to the essence of being as far as love, life, transcendence, more celestial, abstract & extraordinary. Realist rejected these views and wished to depict the more harsh side of life, the inevitable suffering of the everyday struggle. In retrospect the aim of art is truth so this style was more becoming of the human experience than that which was exaggerated through romanticism a far more clerical time and our art reflected the times but like everything else in the universe we evolved.

How would a secessionist use slavery to construct an argument defending a state's right to leave the Union?

Southern states had only ratified the Constitution after an agreement with the North that slavery would never be abolished.

Slavery had been listed in the Declaration of Independence as an unalienable right that no government could violate.

Slavery had been accepted at the time of the Constitution when the Union was created; therefore, if slavery was abolished so was the Union.

If legally owned property, like slaves, could be abolished by the national government, states could secede to protect their rights,
